Chapter 1 by Fatty2By4

"It's not going to...you know....kill me, right?"

"Oh please" said the doctor, or at least I think he's a doctor. "The only danger you'll be in this is the danger of not wanting to take it off"

"Yea...ok" I said starring at the body like machine in front of me. I had signed up for a special military group a few weeks ago, "special" doesn't even begin to describe it at this point. Twelve years in the military and this random guy shows up. He hands me an envelope with an option to work with the best in the military.

Of course I said yes, I mean who gets this opportunity. If I knew what I signed up for I may have had second thoughts.

"So what exactly does this....thing...do?" I asked

"Well I thought that would be obvious, it's a suit. The paper thin material bonds to your nerves, giving you a second skin basically. The material is classified. but let's say an AK 47 could sprav you and you probably wouldn't have a scratch"

"Well it is in its testing day's" the doctor said with a smirk, looking back at his paperwork.

"Brilliant" I thought, "twelve years in the military and I'm going to die in a weird machine in its testing days"

"The material responds to electricity, hence the battery pack here" he points to a small box at the back of the neck "and here" another one on the ankle.

"When electricity is applied, the material reacts and becomes about as strong as diamond, maybe a little under depending on the situation, but it's as flexible as you are. And the best part it gives a bit of strength as well. Now of course that's just the skin. The weapons are fantastic too"

"When do I start?" I said, still nervous

"After the diagnostics you'll meet the rest of your team, and then you'll lead them into their first training"

"Wait, 'lead' them?" I said cutting him off

"Why...yes...you are their captain"

Chapter 2 by Jonathan

"Alright, let's get you suited-up!" The doctor said after the diagnostics.

"Will this, hurt?" I said.

"Hopefully not, because you'll be wearing it a lot." The doctor said

"Well, let's get this over with..." I said timidly.

"Great, I will prepare it for 'docking' I guess you could say" The doctor said more to himself. When I stepped up to the 'docking' platform and got in the suit, I felt great! The suit did everything he said it would, and more. The helmet part showed everything in great detail and it has infra-red, heat, and night vision built in. "Hey doc?" I asked.

"Yes James?" The doctor said looking at me. "You're sitting in the machine."

"Why, right now!" The doctor said happily as he press a red button on the panel and with a loud hiss steam was released from the clamps and he fell to the ground. With a loud thud he landed safely in the new suit just as three others walked in wearing the same kind of suit, only different colors.

Chapter 3 by that one ginger

I look down at myself, my suit color is white, and the others being green, blue, and yellow. "what are we? Power rangers?" the one green blurts out in a harsh tone. "Uh, what's that?" I ask. "Super old show" he replies. The woman in blue chimes in "great, my team is a bunch of nerds" The man in the yellow suit just stands there, not wanting to get involved in the mess. "well that was a nice way to break the ice! Now let's get on to the testing, shall we?" said the doctor, motioning everyone to pass through a big metal door.

The squad enters to find a blank room and the doctor taking an elevator to an elevated control room. "alright, before we begin, configure your weapons. what you get is the weapon best suited for you." the doctor explained through a speaker in the room. "how to we do that?" the man in yellow finally speaking. "just focus on the feeling of the suit touching your hand, you'll get the hang of it." I closed my eyes, and when I opens them, I see a shield and a sword! But the others are having a hard time with getting their weapons. After a bit, each start to form their own weapons. The man in green formed a bulky and heavy gun, but his suit allowed him to lift it. The woman in blue got a bow and arrows, and the man in yellow formed an assortment of knives. All of the team seemed to be satisfied with what they got.

"Alright, let's begin." And the room changed to a beautiful forest ready to test the skills of his recruits.

Chapter 4 by PantherProductions

Like something out of The Hunger Games we started running. But then right in front of us out jumps an automaton. And before it got a chance to attack I jumped up on a log and using it like a springboard jumped higher than i ever would have without the suit. I did a front flip while

"Watch Your back! There are more behind you!" I yelled. As they turned around I did too. There were automatons everywhere. I heard a yell and gunfire but I didn't dare turn around for fear that the automatons i was facing would get a shot at my back. Stepping forward i felt scared, yelt slightly exhilarated, like this is what i was made to do. I did a 180 flip and started swinging at anything that moved. Ducking, swinging, dodging, blocking, there was nothing that could stop me. I was invincible. Before long all of the automatons in front of me were dust, for everytime i struck, they would crumble. My team clearly did not feel invincible because i heard a scream like bloody murder and i turned around and saw the man in green go down and disintegrate. Just then, a voice came out of nowhere.

"Measure 3-6-5-2-7-j-0, recall." Instantly we were in a blue room with the doctor standing in front of us.

Chapter 5 by Wolfie56

The man in green was there lying on his back when we entered the blue room. The doctor immediately went over to the guy in green and spoke into his earpiece. Seconds later, four men wearing white lab coats like the doctor, came out with a gurney and took the man in green to what I assumed would be the hospital. After that, the doctor asked what we felt like out on the field. After a little bit of silence, I spoke up and said that I felt like nothing could stop me. "Good, good, anybody else?" Everybody else said that it was cool, but would take some getting used to. The doctor told everybody else to go to their rooms, but instructed me to stay. After everybody had left, the doctor came up to me and asked "what you did out there wasn't normal, it should've taken a couple minutes to get used to the suits, or as you can see with your teammates, days or even months." I was speechless, months to get used too that? That was crazy! I felt right at home wearing the suit. "Can you explain in detail how you felt during this... test I guess we'll call it?" Said the doctor. I responded with "I don't exactly know, I kinda just new what I was doing." The doctor put that in his notes and took off.

A week later, once the man in green had healed, we were scheduled to do another test, when we entered the blue room, we stood around and waited for the drill to start. Once it started we realized that this one was far different than the last drill we went through. This one was snow

There was a 50 foot giant standing atop me! I quickly looked around and I saw that there were snow giants of all sizes around me. I tried my power and my blade and jumped up and stabbed him in the side while sending an electric current throughout the giant's body. It only staggered him a little bit but didn't kill him. I realized that everybody had a giant that was accustomed to their skill level. I kept on stabbing him and electrifying him. Finally, I finished him off. Everybody else was just about done. The doctor said that everybody should report to the hospital immediately, there had been an anomaly in one of our suits.

Chapter 6 by Jake Cielo

The whole squad looked around in confusion at one another. An anomaly?

"What does this mean?", I asked slowly.

The doctor looked up sadly. "It means", he said, "One of you now has a micro-technological disease. It turns you into a robot from the inside out."

We looked around again at each other, but now the emotion on all of our faces was clear: horror and fear boiled just under the surface of all of us.

There was no talking on the way back to the hospital near the training grounds. All anyone could think about was which one of us was going to die.

Suddenly the guy who had been running alongside me in the drills piped up. "And what exactly does this disease do to you?"

The doctor looked grave. "First, it takes over all your blood's cells and converts them into tiny worker machines. Then, they attack your brain and take over your motor functions until you under their control."

The doctor's pad made a sound and he looked at it, his eyes scanning the screen.

Then, he looked at the woman in blue gravely. "I'm very sorry, but you have th-

He was cut off by the screams the woman in blue let out. It was the most terrifying thing I've ever seen. She fell to the floor and began to writhe, and while that happened everyone could see the nano bots moving right underneath her skin and destroying her body.

"Alright, I know it's been awhile, but we're going to go ahead and continue with the test" The doctor said. Almost immediately the room changed into a huge forest.

We took off. Electricity was flowing through my suit, almost as if it was increasing my speed. It was just a normal test, just re-testing us basically.

"Hey!" Screamed the person in yellow. "Do you guys see that?"

I barely got a chance to see what he was yelling about when I saw an arrow shoot past me. "What's shooting at us?" I ask. I heard a loud cracking noise behind me where the arrow hit a tree.

"It looks like a person wearing blue-" The guy in green starts saying.

"Rosalina?!" I yell. We all look to where she was standing, But she was gone. We turn around to see her, bow drawn back ready to shoot.

Chapter 8 by Kyle Tuter

She fired an arrow that launched straight for the man in green, but luckily he dodged out of the way. As she went to get another arrow, her suit flashed from blue to red. The suit did this back and forth repeatedly until it stopped at red. She shot another arrow, this time aiming for the man in yellow. The arrow hit him in the arm. He threw a knife at her in retaliation, but couldn't aim properly because of his arm.

I ran at her, swinging my sword. She held out her bow to dodge the sword, and to my surprise it actually worked.

"You're a lot stronger than she used to be!" I say to her. She doesn't respond.

Electricity was flowing around my arms and up the sword. I ran at her again. Putting all my strength into one big swing, I break the bow into two pieces.

I grab her by the head and give her a good shake. Her suit flashes between colors again.

"Maybe if I overload her suit..." I say. She looks at me. I say that she takes off running at an alarming speed. I chase after her. At first I'm way slower than her, but the electricity flowing through my legs increased my speed enough to catch her.

I grab her by the arm and release a huge pulse of electricity, the biggest pulse I've ever done. She drops to the ground and her suit changes back to blue.

The forest changed back to the training room. The doctor runs in.

"What did you do?!" He yells at me, "Electricity doesn't fry the nanobots- it SUPERCHARGES them! Now you might be infected too!"

I looked down at Rosalina and saw that wasn't blue, or even red. She was solid black.

I looked down at my arm and saw it was starting to turn black.
